ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This list of publications issued in the 1961 Census Monograph Programme was prepared to provide an overview of the monographs and labour force studies published.

Most of the summaries of the publications have been taken from the 1971 DBS Catalogue of Publications, Cat. No. 11-204. Ottawa: Information Canada, 1971. This catalogue was prepared under the direction of Mr. W.E. Cowell, Chief, Inquiries Section, Information Division, Statistics Canada.

The monographs listed can be ordered from Publications Distribution, Statistics Canada, Ottawa K1A OT6, or from the bookstores of Information Canada in Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. Please quote the catalogue number as well as the publication title when ordering.

REMERCIEMENT

Cette liste de publications provenant du programme des monographies sur le recensement de 1961 a été préparé dans le but de présenter une vue d'ensemble des monographies et des études sur la main-d'oeuvre publiées.

On a extrait la plupart des sommaires des publications du Catalogue des Publications du B.F.S., Cat. No 11-204. Ottawa: Information Canada, 1971. M. W.E. Cowell, chef, section des renseignements, division de l'information, Statistique Canada, a dirigé la préparation de ce catalogue.

Les monographies citées, on peut les commander à la Diffusion des publications, Statistique Canada, Ottawa K1A OT6, ou aux librairies d'Information Canada à Halifax, Montréal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg ou à Vancouver. Dans toute commande veuillez indiquer, s'il vous plaît, le numéro de catalogue ainsi que le titre de la publication.

2. SUMMARIES - SOMMAIRES

2.1 1961 Census Monographs

Urban Development in Canada, by Leroy O. Stone. DBS Cat. No. 99-542. Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1967. 293 pp.

A study of the urban population in Canada 1871 to 1961, describing and analysing its growth, geographical distribution and sex-age composition. Discusses some demographic aspects of metropolitan growth in Canada, and describes the increasing concentration of the Canadian population into the principal areas of metropolitan development. Reviews indicators of major historical trends and selected aspects of sex-age composition and features of the age profile of net migration ratios for census metropolitan areas, and some larger cities. The appendices contain detailed definitions of concepts and technical notes describing various data processing and estimating procedures.

Trends in Canadian Marketing by M.S. Moyer and G. Snyder. DBS Cat. No. 99-543. Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1967 321 pp.

An analysis of trends in distribution structure and marketing practices in Canada with special emphasis on retailing, covering primarily the period from 1930 to 1964. Discusses the reshuffling of marketing functions as between major institutions in the marketing system. Estimates the cost of marketing in Canada, and examines its justification. Discusses the evolution, position, and prospects of such institutions as department stores, corporate and voluntary chain stores, shopping centres, independent stores, etc. Discusses long range trends in marketing management as part of the continuing rationalization of the marketing process.

Incomes of Canadians by J.R. Podoluk. DBS Cat. No. 99-544.
Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1968. 356 pp.

Analyzes various aspects of the income distribution in Canada, using income data collected from non-farm households in the 1961 Census of Canada and in the Surveys of Consumer Finances conducted for inter-censal years. Discusses the sources of incomes of the adult population, the relationship between earnings and characteristics of the labour force such as occupation, sex and education, and the private rates of return to education. The structure of family income is examined by the family life cycle and family composition. Discusses regional income disparities and factors associated with them and, at the national level, the low income or poverty population, the causal factors of low income or poverty, and the incidence of low income by various family characteristics. One chapter is devoted to an income profile of the aged who constitute a significant proportion of the low income population. Changes in the income distribution in real terms and trends in income inequality between 1951 and 1961 are summarized. The appendix outlines sources and methods, the relationship of the estimates to the personal income in the National Accounts and comments on the reliability of the estimates.

The Impact of Immigration on Canada's Population by Warren E. Kalbach. DBS Cat. No. 99-546. Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1970. 465 pp.

Examines post-war immigration in its historical context, i.e., as a continuation of trends in the foreign-born population resulting from variations in the size as well as character of immigration throughout both pre-World War II and post-war periods. Growth and distribution in relation to Canada's population is illustrated by analysing the age and sex structure, ethnic composition and population mobility. The resemblance of native-born population to post-war and pre-war immigrants in relation to their demographic contribution is examined with special emphasis on ethnic origin differentials. Political identification and integration is covered at a very elementary level by means of the citizenship status of post-war immigrants who had been resident in Canada for a sufficient period of time to attain eligibility.

Migration in Canada: Regional Aspects by Leroy C. Stone.
DBS Cat. No. 99-548. Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1969. 407 pp.

Describes and analyses some of the major patterns of migration in Canada, provides a focus on regional differentials in migration flow, and studies measures of migration rates for provinces, urban areas, metropolitan areas and counties and census divisions. A major purpose of this volume is to provide a treatment of migration in Canada which brings out specific patterns and associations relevant to the role of migration in regional development. The general theme of this work are the regional patterns and socio-economic aspects of migration in Canada. This monograph is based mainly on census statistics, particularly those from the 1961 Census of Canada.

Internal Migration in Canada: Demographic Analyses by M.V. George. DBS Cat. No. 99-557. Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1970. 249 pp.

Measures and describes the types, volume, trends, streams and patterns of internal migration in Canada. Most of the analysis relates to interprovincial migration; but from 1961 Census question on residence five years earlier, data are presented on local mobility and interprovincial migration. Analyses the interrelations of population growth with internal migration, and lays a basis for further exploration of the demographic economic and social effects of migration within Canada. Based mainly on census statistics of province of birth from 1931 through 1961, and of change of residence between 1956 and 1961. Complements "Migration in Canada: Some Regional Aspects" by L.O. Stone (Catalogue No. 99-548).

2.2 Labour Force Studies in the 1961 Census Monograph Programme

Historical Estimates of the Canadian Labour Force by F.T. Denton and S. Ostry. DBS Cat. No. 99-549. Ottawa:
Queen's Printer, 1967. E. and F., 49 pp.

Estimates of labour force by age and sex from 1921, by sex 1901 and 1911, total from 1851 - 1891, on a conceptually consistent basis utilizing decennial census and monthly survey data. Includes full discussion of concepts of the economically active population.

The Occupational Composition of the Canadian Labour Force
by Sylvia Ostry. DBS Cat No. 99-550. Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1967. 90 pp.

An analysis of long-run changes in the development of the working population in Canada among the major occupation groups. Includes an exposition of the main structural changes within occupations.

Provincial Differences in Labour Force Participation by Sylvia Ostry. DBS Cat. No. 99-551. Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1968. E. and F., 37 pp.

An analysis of the extent and nature of interprovincial variations in labour force participation rates, focussing on the distinction between structural and behavioural effects.

Unemployment in Canada by Sylvia Ostry. DBS Cat No. 99-552.
Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1968. 83 pp.

A full examination of the profile of unemployment in Canada. Includes an analysis of underemployment, family patterns of joblessness and the relation between unemployment and income loss.

The Female Worker in Canada by Sylvia Ostry. DBS Cat. No. 99-553. Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1968. 66 pp.

An exposition of changing trends in the labour force activity of women over recent decades and of the main factors influencing these developments. Includes a discussion of male-female differentials in annual earnings and some Canada-United States comparisons.

Geographic Composition of the Canadian Labour Force by Sylvia Ostry. DBS Cat. No. 99-554. Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1968. 41 pp.

Examines the provincial distribution of the labour force and its major components, and the extent and nature of structural changes in the occupational and industrial deployment of manpower within the provinces in relation to the national pattern of activity.

Working Life Tables for Canadian Males by F.T. Denton and S. Ostry. DBS Cat. No. 99-555. Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1969, 56 pp.

Presents for the first time estimated tables of working life for males in Canada. Tables have been compiled for Canada at each of the decennial census dates from 1921 to 1961 with separate tables for 1961 for the five geographical regions.

The Growth of Manpower in Canada by Frank T. Denton. DBS Cat. No. 99-556. Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1970. 83 pp.

Examines the growth of the population and labour force since the middle of the nineteenth century. The contributions of internal migration and changes in birth and death rates are considered. Attention is paid to important changes in the composition of the population and the labour force which are related to growth, including changes in age structures, male-female ratios, rural-urban and farm, non-farm shares, the labour force participation of men and women, and regional or provincial distributions.

2.3 Monographies sur le Recensement de 1961

Tendances et Facteurs de la Fécondité au Canada, par Jacques Henripin. No de cat. B.F.S. 99-541F. Ottawa: Imprimeur de la Reine, 1968. 425 pages

Une analyse de la fécondité basée sur l'exploitation des recensements et des statistiques de l'état civil du Canada, du XVII^e siècle à nos jours. Cette monographie: sonde l'évolution passée de la fécondité en se rapportant plus particulièrement aux tendances historiques de certains facteurs qui ont influé sur la fécondité: distribution par âge, nuptialité, fécondité légitime et fécondité illégitime; étudie les variations de la fécondité en fonction de certains phénomènes depuis longtemps associés à la fécondité: habitat, âge au mariage, pays de naissance, origine ethnique, langue maternelle, religion, profession du mari, niveau d'instruction, revenu et travail de la femme; examine certains aspects particuliers de la fécondité: intervalles entre naissances, rang de naissance et fécondité illégitime. Les appendices contiennent des notes techniques décrivant divers procédés d'évaluation et d'estimation de même que des remarques sur la valeur de l'échantillon.

2.4 Etudes sur la Main-d'oeuvre

Relevés chronologiques de la main-d'oeuvre canadienne, par Frank T. Denton et Sylvia Ostry. No de catalogue B.F.S. 99-549F. Ottawa: Imprimeur de la Reine, 1967, A. et F., 50 pages Relevés de la main-d'oeuvre selon l'âge et le sexe depuis 1921, selon le sexe en 1901 et 1911, total de 1851 à 1891, à base de concepts uniformes et à partir des données des recensements décennaux et des enquêtes mensuelles. Cette publication comprend de plus un examen approfondi des concepts de la population économiquement active.

Différences provinciales du taux d'activité, par Sylvia Ostry. No de catalogue B.F.S. 99-551F. Ottawa: Imprimeur de la Reine, 1968. A. et F., 40 pages

Analyse des taux de participation de la main-d'oeuvre quant à l'importance et à la nature des variations d'une province à l'autre, centrée sur la différence des effets sur la structure et le comportement.
